The Lurie Institute for Disability Policy Announces
New Postdoctoral Research Training Program in Disability Policy

The Lurie Institute for Disability Policy is pleased to announce the availability of a new post-doctoral research training program in disability policy research. We invite applications from qualified candidates for one- or two-year fellowships. Advanced training is available under the mentorship of the nationally-recognized faculty of the Heller School for Social Policy and Management. This disability policy postdoctoral training program is part of the Heller School's intellectually vibrant community. Qualified candidates are invited to join a community that thrives on rigorous research, interdisciplinary collaboration, and supports the mission of knowledge advancing social justice. A range of exciting research opportunities is available to fellows, including investigations of the health and well-being of children and adults with disabilities and their caregiving families.

The primary goal of this fellowship is to prepare scholars to conduct rigorous research that can be applied in today's complex policy environment. Training of post-doctoral fellows will include immediate engagement in an existing research program coupled with opportunities to develop skills in preparing grant proposals, managing research projects, developing scholarly articles and scientific presentations and disseminating findings to advocates and policy makers. Fellows will also have the opportunity to develop their own independent research programs.

Applicants must have received their doctoral degrees within the past three years. Applicants with earned doctorates in disability studies, economics, public health, public policy, social work, and sociology are particularly encouraged. Fellowships are available for one or two years. Competitive stipends are available, based on experience. In addition, fellows are eligible to enroll in Brandeis University's health and dental insurance programs. The position also includes a travel fund to support the presentation of the fellow's scholarship at scientific conferences. Applicants should submit a curriculum vita and two letters of reference. Copies of relevant publications and a brief, 1-2 page statement of research experience and fellowship goals must be provided for full consideration. Review of applications will begin immediately; appointment dates are flexible.
