The emergence of individual and family support in state service delivery systems

Braddock, D., Hemp, R., Parish, S.
Mental Retardation. 1997;35(6):497

Abstract: After more than a century of organizing mental retardation services and funding around facilities and groups of residents, states have begun to target their resources to individuals and families. In the fifth edition of The State of the States in Developmental Disabilities (Braddock, Hemp, Parish, & Westrich, 1998), we attempted to capture the extent to which this new, more individualized focus is emerging in the states.